Scott Roberts, the Vice President of Development at the Freedom Foundation, is experienced at organizing grassroots activist and building effective coalitions. Prior to joining the Freedom Foundation,

Scott was a small business owner for 15 years during which he built expertise in residential land development and represented clients throughout the Puget Sound region. Scott's own experiences with local governments drew him into politics. He understands first-hand the frustration citizens have with their government—and, more importantly, how they can effectively ignite positive change.
